

ABSTRACT

The invention is directed to a topical composition for heightened sensitivity and arousal for humans. The topical composition includes an organic fluid carrier, preferably glycerin, containing an effective amount of capsaicinoids extract, the active principle in chili peppers. In a further embodiment of the invention, the topical composition includes honey and evening primrose oil, in addition to capsaicinoids extract in the glycerin carrier. The present invention also includes a method for heightened sensitivity and arousal for humans. The method includes providing a topical composition, including an organic fluid carrier, preferably glycerin, containing an effective amount of capsaicinoids extract, and applying the topical composition to the genital area of a human to produce heightened sensitivity and arousal.